Windows XP/VISTA - Mouse Pointers and how to change how they look.

Your mouse pointers will differ from those shown here if you are using a different pointer scheme. Your computer provider may have set a different default scheme. The pointers change during movement over the page and after clicking a mouse button to initiate an action.

XP

To change your pointer theme – On the desktop left click START then Control Panel then click Mouse in the Control Panel. The Mouse Properties Window opens (right).

Left click Pointers – Open the dropdown box under Scheme and select a scheme. The new scheme will be shown. If you want to use new scheme click OK.

Vista

- Open Mouse by clicking the Start button , clicking Control Panel, clicking Hardware (Mouse only if in Classic View), and then clicking Mouse. Click the Pointers tab, and then do one of the following:
- To give all of your pointers a new look, click the Scheme list, and then click a new mouse pointer scheme or to change an individual pointer, click the pointer you want to change in the Customize list, click Browse, click the pointer you want to use, and then click Open.
